LOUISVILLE: WEDNESDAY, JULY 20, 1859.

Reading Matter on Every Page.

These Terrible Extracts—The Old Boy in Trouble.

The Louisville Journal, of yesterday, said we charged the "old boy" of that paper with responding to only one of the anti-slavery paragraphs we republished from his pen. That is a mistake, but whether "wilful" or the result of a perverse and disordered intellect," we can't say.

We republished five extracts from articles gotten up by the editor of the Journal, and said "the old boy" of that paper responded to two of them.

The following are the quotations from his writings and endorsements, to which he replied:

"Every man who does not wish to see the powers of the Northern and Western States depart forever, every man who does not wish to see a slave now a free man, added to the Union, and to see the slaves of the Southern States, who are going up to meet the Lord in the air, and impugn the veracity upon our land, will oppose the purchase of Texas with a deep and irreconcilable determination."

"If there was a State in the Union composed of free negroes, and the Constitution gave them the right to rule, I should be much obliged to them to right me."

It is hardly necessary to add that the response to the first of these extracts was a pile of incense.

The "old boy" of the Journal claimed that he wrote that paragraph about Texas in 1850, when he was twenty-seven years old. Surely the Ishmael infant ought to have all the wheels made for Connecticut brass clocks turned into medals, to wear around his neck. How much more appropriate would such brass medals be than the gold one which the monstrous baby says he got of a "bloody furrier," who, no doubt, felt that he was properly rewarding the brass knuckling which the "old boy" had brought upon his countrymen? And if these brass-clock wheel medals would not suffice for the huge baby, a few rattles might be made for him out of the wooden pumice of his native Connecticut. We insist upon the big baby of the Journal being supplied with medals and rattles worthy of the "old boy."

His response to the second paragraph was equally silly. He contended that if free negroes were permitted to vote he would like to have them vote with him for right, instead of with other partisans for wrong. There are plenty of men, and indeed all the best men in the nation, who would not have free negroes vote under any circumstances. So said the Democrat, with whom Holt was talking, when the paragraph quoted came into existence, and so say we, all true Democrats and patriots. We would not have free negroes vote under any circumstances, and would repudiate the Constitution if it permitted negro suffrage. Not go with the "old boy" of the Journal. He would take all the free negro votes he could get under the Constitution. He would have Sambo go to the polls, if the Constitution permitted it, and stink the vote of President Buchanan into a nullity. He would have Gumbo stick his Jaybird heel between any white man and the ballot box, and thus haricide the polls until his vote canceled that of an American citizen. We should hardly have expected this of an editor who has known foreigners to be brass-knuckled for attempting to go with Americans, but there is no accounting for the freaks of the "old boy."

The Journal has also attempted to respond to our second extract from its columns in the following words:

"All men are born right to liberty, no matter what color." "Slavery is a dreadful vampire, drawing the life blood of the republic."

The reply attributes the article from which the extract is taken to a former editor of the Journal now no more, as if to cover whatever blame may attach to it with the ashes of the dead.

The "old boy" of the Journal is thus ready to shift responsibility from himself for what appeared in his columns, but hesitates not day after day to attribute the present editor of the Courier. We should like, however, for the "old boy" of the Journal to republish the article from which this extract is taken. A reprint would be much fairer than his paraphrase. The readers of the Journal remember that only a few years ago the "old boy" denoted that anything like that extract ever appeared in the Journal. The Courier then made him swallow his own words, and if he will now give the article entire, we will make him swallow his paraphrase. The swallowing in 1855 was somewhat as follows:—The Journal on the 17th of September, said "the sentiment which the Courier professes to quote from us in the prominent of large type, ALL MEN HAVE A RIGHT TO LIBERTY, NO MATTER WHAT COLOR" is down right a fabrication as ever was penned." And on the 21st of September, the Journal swallowed its own words as follows:—"Upon examination we find that the expression (ALL MEN HAVE A RIGHT TO LIBERTY, NO MATTER WHAT COLOR) occurred in a long article in the Journal of 1854." We say, then, we may make the "old boy" of the Journal swallow his paraphrase in the same way if he will give us the article in question.

In relation to slavery, he (Mr. Corwin) had during forty years maintained the position occupied by the Journal. The record of his whole life would prove it, if the record of his future life should show that he was with them earnestly upon anti-slavery principles.

He disclosed the fugitive slave law. It is a bad law, but an unjust one. He would not have voted for it if he had been in the Senate.

Mr. Corwin proceeded to say he would prohibit slavery everywhere. The Constitution gives Congress the right to limit, and it is the duty of Congress to do it.

Scholar, an ultra Republican; Underwood's name is used merely for effect, and with no intention of nominating him, and Forney is Douglas' right hower, who is openly supporting the Republicans in order to defeat the Democracy.

With such evidences before him, ought any sound and conservative man in this district hesitate how his vote should be cast at the approach, election?

Some Choice Extracts—A Yankee Abolitionist in the South, 1855.

On the 6th of October, 1855, in an article relating to the destruction by a mob of Cassius M. Clay's Abolition paper at Lexington, the editor of the Louisville Journal, in endeavoring to escape the charge of Abolitionism made against him, endeavored to show that he was only an Emancipationist. He thus said:

"We expressed at the same time our conviction that every man who had been adapted for cotton, &c., & who still will be found fit for slave labor, and owned our intention to effect the same, & that the slaves were to be set free as soon as possible, as is required by the law of God."

Mr. J. H. Jewell is respectfully invited to attend these appointments.

scant three feet six inches water in the canal last evening by the mark. During the previous twenty-four hours the river had receded two and a half inches in the falls, equal to seven inches. Portland, the highest point, was down to three feet seven inches in the canal by

the time of the low water, and was in the shade at 10 o'clock in the afternoon.

The river along the low water are again quite pronounced, and the High Flyer, the

Louis, and we sold her board over the bar,

but she will not stop fast.

It was thought, however, that she could soon be got off with the assistance of a terry boat.

demanded yesterday in New Orleans, and stock $10 per the ways at Louisville, Saturday.

As soon as she became aware of the fact, she began to run to the South. No. 2 will be deferred for administration and repair.

We learn from A. J. Armstrong, the courteesee, that the High Flyer, from St. Louis, was at 250 feet six inches water in the canal by

the time of the low water, and was

in the shade at 10 o'clock in the afternoon.

The High Flyer met the Fanny Bullett at Cairo, lodged it down to the guards.
